PICO 2000 driver controllers work in Windows 2000 and XP. They allow microprocessors to process files with files created by Windows 2000 tools. CiLiS and SMART32 software from STMicroelectronics for PIC2000 series microcontrollers Programming The MSC68C standard programming language is based on MSC89C, which in turn is based on GCC. Setup and testing The SMART 32 initialization program is based on CreateBus. The environment for automatic creation of SMART class devices was developed by STM. GUI The motherboard has 4 USB ports (together with a SATA controller), a built-in RS-232 serial interface, one interface for connecting 8-bit sensors, and a number of other ports. Configuration The following features are available in the standard configuration: Pi1 and Pi2 Boot Cycle When a Pi processor appears on a motherboard, SMART matches the appropriate processor driver for the PIC processor that the device supports. This allows the PIC processor to process data using SMART. This feature uses SMART to find a module that supports a 32-bit processor driver.
